SEMINAR ON THE
AMERICAN REVOLUTION

*Friday-Sunday,
September 25-27, 2026*

Friday, September 25, 2026

8:00 am-5:00pm “Behind Enemy Lines”: The Pawlet Expedition during the Saratoga Campaign—America’s History, LLC will offer a one-day Revolutionary War bus tour led by Bruce Venter. The Pawlet Expedition, orchestrated by Benjamin Lincoln, is an underappreciated operation during Burgoyne’s campaign in September 1777. A complete tour description will be on the America’s History website. The cost is $175 per person (includes coach bus, lunch, gratuities, materials and refreshments). Last year’s tour sold out, so register early. There are two ways to register: go online at AmericasHistoryLLC.com and click the register for tours page or call 703-785-4373.

5:30-6:30pm Opening Reception—Join seminar faculty and museum staff at an opening reception at the Pavilion and King’s Garden with light refreshments and cash bar.

7:00-7:45pm Dressing for Contempt?: The British Army in North America—Understandings of the British military in North America have evolved dramatically in the recent past. Far from the hidebound, conservative automata of popular conception the British were flexible and adaptive, impulses that extended even to their dress. Changes to the army’s attire have long been identified but often interpreted solely as a response to the environmental conditions of North America. Fort Ticonderoga’s Curator Dr. Matthew Keagle considers the range of influences on adaptations to the conventional uniforms of the redcoats serving in America. This presentation offers not only pragmatic but political interpretations for their willingness to break with convention and regulation fighting the American rebels.

Saturday, September 26, 2026

9:00am Welcome—Beth Hill, President and CEO, Fort Ticonderoga.

9:15-9:45am War Powers: A Reconsideration of the Declaration of Independence—The Declaration of Independence did more than proclaim American independence and men’s political equality. It was also an exercise of the Second Continental Congress’ war powers that set forth the United States’ reasons and right to wage war and pronounced them legitimate combatants. Dr. Ricardo A. Herrera is Senior Historian, George Washington Leadership Institute at Mount Vernon, Virginia, and Professor, ret., U.S. Army War College.

10:00-10:30am “You Are Directed to Maintain Your Post”: The Jericho Mutiny in Context—In 1776, the Continental Army garrison at the blockhouse in Jericho, Vermont, along the Winooski (Onion) River, uncertain of its mission and alarmed by reports of British activity, mutinied and retreated to Fort Ticonderoga against orders. Decades later in 1798, Representative Matthew Lyon’s role in the episode resurfaced through an accusation of cowardice, prompting the first physical confrontation in Congress. The incident illuminates the strategic importance of the Winooski frontier and the ways divergent perspectives between commanders and soldiers shaped both the lived experience and the memory of the Revolutionary War. Eli Dandurand is an independent historian from Vermont.

10:45-11:15am A Garrisoned Green: The Boston Common and the Tensions of Military Occupation—Explore how Boston Common transformed from a civic gathering space into a symbol of imperial control and colonial defiance during the years surrounding the American Revolution. This presentation examines the British military occupation’s profound effects on the Common, including its use as an encampment, a site of punishment and disease, and ultimately the starting point for the first battles of the Revolution. Dr. Kelly M. Kilcrease is a Professor of Business at the University of New Hampshire at Manchester whose academic research explores the intersections of business and urban history, including the books Manchester’s Shoe Industry and The Story of Boston’s Long Wharf, which examine the evolution of regional enterprise and the transformation of public and commercial spaces such as the Boston Common.

11:30am-12:00pm Those Whom Liberty Forgot: The Motivations of Black Soldiers to Fight in the American Revolutionary War—During the American Revolution, Black soldiers fought valiantly on both the Patriot and Loyalist sides of the war. Traditional historical narratives often portray their participation as driven solely by the pursuit of freedom from chattel slavery. Drawing on firsthand accounts and a wide range of historical records such as diaries, newspapers, pamphlets, military reports, and pension documents, this presentation challenges that assumption by arguing that their motivations were much more diverse and multifaceted. Black soldiers fought not only for the promise of emancipation, but also for a complex set of political, economic, and social aspirations; the desire to assert and defend their manhood; and, in many cases, the fundamental need to survive. Carissa O’Pry is a recent Master of History graduate from Texas Tech University whose research interests include early American history, U.S. religious and folkloric histories, and the history of emotions.

12:00-1:45pm Lunch Break (Box lunch from America’s Fort Café included).

1:00-1:30pm Book Signing at the Museum Store.

2:00-2:45pm War without Mercy: The Revolution as an Existential War—The clarion call to arms of “Liberty or Death” was far more than just rhetoric: they were the choices thousands of individuals faced during the War for Independence. Military restraint crumbled in the face of events that ignited virtually unstoppable cycles of revenge and retribution across the rebellious colonies. And it was at the local level—where most of the war was fought—that combatants believed their very existence was in question, which led to an acceptance of violence against persons and property as preferable to a defeat equated with political, cultural, and even physical extinction. It was the very definition of an existential war. Dr. Mark Edward Lender is Professor Emeritus at Kean University and author or co-author of over a dozen books on American military, social, and institutional history.

3:00-3:30pm The American Revolutionaries and Their Unlikely Ally—Unlike the 19th and 20th centuries, the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth mattered to the Founders from the decades leading to the Revolution, until Jefferson declared that the Enlightenment ended with the final partition of Poland. The United States and the Commonwealth shared a sense of republicanism, and the loss of Poland presented the precariousness of the new nation’s position. Christopher Fritsch is an adjunct faculty member at the Trinity River Campus of Tarrant County College in Fort Worth, Texas.

5:00pm Dinner at America’s Fort Café (pre-registration only).

Sunday, September 27, 2026

9:00-9:30am Captain Hazard: A Loyalist Privateer in a World Turn'd Upside Down—Stanton Hazard was born into one of Rhode Island's "first families," but when the war began, he broke from his predominantly Patriot family, launching a successful privateering career from British-occupied Newport and New York. His experiences during the war, and afterwards, exemplify the challenges many Loyalists faced as the security they had once known collapsed. Dr. Len Travers is Emeritus Professor of History at the University of Massachusetts at Dartmouth, and the author of Hodges' Scout: A Lost Patrol of the French & Indian War.

9:45-10:15am The Rise and Fall of the Philadelphia Quakers in Revolutionary Pennsylvania—During the American Revolution, the Philadelphia Quakers found themselves at the center of a controversy that ignited a firestorm of paranoia, anger and vengeance. This is a story of the precipitous rise of the Society of Friends in Pennsylvania, their goal of what seemed a utopian society, which lasted for a half a century before colliding violently with the realities of 18th-century life. Jeff Denman is an independent scholar and historian whose previous book, John Quincy Adams, Reluctant Abolitionist, examined the former president's relationship to slavery throughout his life and whose other works revolve primarily around the 18th and 19th centuries.

10:30-11:00am Revolutionary Possibilities: The Fighting Quakers & Their Impact on the Friends—Philadelphia Quakers, while notably pacifist, dismissed around 1000 members during the American Revolution for "taking up arms" and other offenses linked with military activity. Many of these Friends helped to form the Free, or Fighting, Quakers—a sect of the faith that supported the movement for Independence—which in turn forced mainstream Friends to address their growing internal dissent and dwindling membership. Jennifer L. Gray has been active in a variety of public history roles for 15 years and currently serves as the Education & Museum Manager at Arch Street Meeting House in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

11:30am Lunch (Box lunch from America's Fort Café included).
